

Lexington, KY

VI

Feb. 07, 1812

The Reporter
Feb. 08, 1812

EARTHQUAKE

Another shock was felt yesterday morning, about half past three o'clock. It was more severe than any which has preceeded it since the first commencement. Previous to the shock, during its continuation and for some time afterwards, there was a loud rumbling like distant thunder.

Kentucky Gazette
Feb. 11, 1812

Earthquakes

On the morning of Thursday last, about half past three o'clock, another violent shock of an earthquake was felt at this place. We have heard of no material injury from its effects as yet - at Frankfort, Louisville, Paris and Chillicothe - some chimnies and brick houses were slightly damaged. This shock was more severe and of longer duration, than any of the former - and caused very general alarm. Several shocks of less force have been noticed since.